

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, 2016 marks Hopkinsville resident Jeff Sisk's 35 years of dedicated service to WHOP, beginning as a part-time engineer as a senior in high school through his current position as program director; and

WHEREAS, Jeff Sisk has become the voice sports fans in the Hopkinsville and surrounding areas have come to depend on for play-by-play coverage of ballgames near and far; and

WHEREAS, his service as host of the Earlybird Show assures that the citizens of Hopkinsville are informed and entertained as they prepare for their day; and

WHEREAS, the various capacities in which Jeff Sisk has served WHOP over the years include duties which demand the inclusion of many nights and weekends into his daily routine, making for some very short nights and some very long hours; and

WHEREAS, Jeff Sisk gratefully acknowledges the support of his family, which now includes grandson Noah, in his calling; and

WHEREAS, WHOP listeners in Hopkinsville, Christian County, and the entire region may look forward to many more years of hearing the voice of Jeff Sisk inform and entertain,

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Carter M. Hendricks, Mayor of Hopkinsville, do hereby proclaim February 12, 2016 as in Hopkinsville and encourage all citizens to congratulate and thank him for his service and dedication to WHOP and our community.

DATED this 12th day of February 2016.

Carter M. Hendricks, Mayor
City of Hopkinsville
